What Do You Think of Japanese Question?

There having been a considerable amount of comment during the past summer regarding renting of houses in Ocean Beach to Japanese families, the Ocean Beach News columns will be open to articles of 500 words or less, from our subscribers. You may say what you wish, within reason, either for or against but please try and confine your selves to facts.

AN OPINION

Why call a meeting of the citizens of Ocean Beach to decide if they will rent their houses to Japanese tenants this coming summer? This problem should be decided by the individual landlord. Why follow the lead of a few men of questionable judgement? I have always found the Japanese to be clean, decent, law-abiding citizens. You never find them on the charity rolls. There are virtually no Japanese criminals. You cannot say this for any other race. The complaint against them by the Caucasians has been that they worked too well, which reflects no credit on the Caucasians. They pay the highest rent, buy the best foods and when they vacate your house they leave it as clean as when they went in—and in a number of cases that I personally know of they left the houses 100% cleaner. That these Japanese coming here for a month in the summer will depreciate the property is a fallacy. Our property values have depreciated I'll admit, but we all know who depreciated our incomes and properties—and I don't mean maybe. All the Japanese have done is to bring into our town a little much needed money for our merchants and landlords. Surely they needed it.

Racial hatred is a rotten thing. Here is what Dr. Ames, a well known sociologist has to say on the subject: "Racial hatred is seldom found in men of broad intellect, culture and refinement. It is generally found in those who have led narrow, restricted lives, the ignorant and the unintelligent. Wherever the pure light of reason and true Christianity go hand in hand, there you will find no racial hatred."

Yours truly,
H. J. Devereaux.

TELLS ABOUT MOHAMMED AND HINDU IDOLS AND BELIEFS

Wednesday Kiwanis luncheon was held at the Loma Tavern with Roland Reed as chairman of the day. Myron Insko and Frank R. Felt were elected delegates to the district convention to be held at Coronado the last of this week; with Ivy Parks and Heber Hartvigsen as alternates. The convention will be attended by several hundred Kiwanians and their wives. Thursday golfing at La Jolla will start off the program with business meetings for the men all day Friday and a trip to Caliente for lunch for the women. Friday evening a musical program and party will be held in Balboa park; then Saturday more business sessions, and Saturday evening, banquet and ball for the governor of Kiwanis, at the Hotel Del Coronado.

Dr. Felt gave a highly interesting talk on religions of India, it being the main interest of the people there, as well as in all parts of the world. His knowledge of the many different creeds of India and the idols they worship and treat as Gods were enlightening to many of his listeners. Judge James A. Fryer was a guest of Heber Hartvigsen for the day.

She has taken an important part in our community life, a worker in the Methodist Sunday school, and until recently a leader in the Brownie and Girl Scout organizations.

Both young folks have been for several years employed at Winter's Bakery in San Diego. They will spend a honeymoon visiting northern California and after November 1st make their home in National City.

The News joins Ruth's many friends here in wishing the newlyweds all the good things they may hope to attain.

The dedication of Ross Field has had a pleasant aftermath in a one hundred dollar check to build a new fence on the south side of the football field. The donor, Mrs. Alfred I. du Pont of Wilmington, Delaware, who was a member of the faculty of Washington elementary school when Mr. Ross was its principal, 10 years ago, heard of the dedication thru a member of the faculty of Point Loma High school. The following excerpt from a letter which accompanied the check is revealing:

"Naturally I am delighted to hear that the Point Loma Athletic Field is to be dedicated to Mr. Pete W. Ross. It is a small tribute to one who has given so much to the people of San Diego. And how far afield his work has reached, one can only estimate. His influence in moulding the young child and the adolescent boy and girl was the greatest with which I have ever had the pleasure of coming in contact."

One of the significant events at P. L. H. S. last week was the assembly in charge of Point Loma Honor Society or Chapter 189 of the California Scholarship Federation at which Miss Gibson, sponsor, fittingly extended membership and presented pins to Bob Albers, Betty Boone, Lucia Clement, Ella Cook, Marjorie Cook, Lily Bell Couts, Stuart Fraser, Mack Graham, Milton Heller, Eugenia Karns, Julia Kelly, Nina Kline, Morris Landon, Jane Largent, Jeanne Lehman, Harvey Leonard, Fielder Lutes, Anita Milligan, Rosemary Moats, George Morikawa, Lucille Neumont, Thelma Olson, John Plank, Blanche Price, Mary Shreve, Bill Shreve, David Sterne and Marva Belt. An eloquent address to the twenty-nine honor students, the school, and faculty on the subject "The Meaning of Scholarship" was delivered by Dr. Leslie of State Teachers College at San Diego.

At this scholarship assembly, Miss Gibson, speaking for the Point Loma Chapter, announced the signal honor recently conferred upon Barbara Sloane of the June Class of '34 in the form of a scholarship to Scripps College, Pomona. The California Scholarship Federation has fifteen scholarships to dispose of among two hundred and fifty chapters. Barbara Sloane reflects credit upon Chapter 189 at Point Loma High by receiving one of those fifteen scholarships.

On October 20, the advisors of all San Diego High School Chapters of Scholarship Societies will attend the State Convention for Advisors at Riverside. Miss Alma Giddings will represent Hoover High; Mrs. Hamman, San Diego High; Mrs. Maull, La Jolla High; and Miss Gibson, Point Loma High.

—PLHS—
Last week's assemblies were of more than usual interest. The second one consisted of two informative and educational films presented to Point Loma High by the Bell Telephone company. Thirty minutes of profitable time gave the Lomans in "What Country Please" an insight into the telephone spanning the world as it hooks United States to Europe, Australia, South America, Mexico and the Far North. The second reel, a practical comic of "This and That" about how a telephone works, was regrettably concluded by "Go to your fifth period classes."

—PLHS—
If we were to gather together all students and faculty in Point Loma High who have travelled and let them detail their journeyings and describe their impressions, we might be surprised to find ourselves in possession of a scrap book of first hand geography, perhaps not very accurate, but at least very individual. Frances Tene, a newcomer among Lomans after a two year sojourn in the Philippines, is already considered a Loman in good standing, member of the Junior class.

El Nora Mills, a post graduate student from El Centro, is rapidly making a place for herself at Point Loma High school by her friendliness and fine work.

Supervisor Agrees With Voting Places at Beach Candidate State Senate Grand Jury Report and Point Loma Reported Capable

COUNTY OF SAN DIEGO BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

October 15, 1934
Board of Supervisors,
Court House,
San Diego, California
Dear Sirs:
The partial Grand Jury report on the Welfare Department, to my mind, was a complete vindication of the charges brought against the department and some of its employees. It also brought out some defects in the policies, some just criticisms, and some recommendations of merit. Already the Board of Supervisors have acted on two recommendations, and no doubt will act on the others in due time.

If the Grand Jury had had more time to have taken evidence, other than complaints, a number of the criticisms against Mr. Louch would have been clarified. Owing to the rumored belligerent policy of the daily newspapers toward the Welfare Department, Mr. Louch should not be censured for going ahead with his work, and not using county time in a futile attempt to combat this unfair publicity.

It was generous of the Grand Jury to recognize the wonderful work Mr. Louch rendered in the SERA set-up, and to give him due praise, but they were in error for criticizing him for doing it. Mr. Louch did not wish to do this work, and requested permission to resign as secretary of the SERA two months or more before he finally was allowed to resign, but was refused by a majority of the Board of Supervisors. The blame, if any, should rest with the Supervisors for refusing to allow Mr. Louch to resign when he requested it. The Supervisors felt justified, however, inasmuch as we had borrowed nearly half a million dollars of State Bond money and Mr. Louch was in a position to keep track of it.

The Grand Jury worked diligently and sincerely on this problem and should be complimented on its report. The whole matter finally simmers down to a tempest in a teapot, and was instigated at this time purely for political purposes, as reports of this and two previous Grand Juries will indicate.

Yours truly,
Edgar F. Hastings
Supervisor, First District

WARREN WALKER SCHOOL

William Welch was appointed the safety officer of the week. He was chosen for this honorary position because of his good behavior record. The third grade is studying the life, customs, food, dress and modes of travel of the various tribes of American Indians. A suggested activity has been the building of an Indian wigwam on the playground.

The fourth grade is interested in the pioneer life of early Americans and is reading "The Life of Daniel Boone" by C. Richard Schaare. The upper grades are taking an imaginary trip through tropical Africa and at present are traveling up the Congo river by steamer to the interior of Belgian Congo.

The kindergarten class has organized a rhythm band and has chosen as its first piece, "March Militaire."

The PTA of Point Loma High school will find it difficult to surpass their benefit bridge tea at the home of Mrs. Everett N. Curtis, 2406 Locust on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 10. The day was lovely, the Curtis home delightful, the bridge crowd large and gay, and the tea party's excellent coffee and cakes something to warm the cockles of the heart at four o'clock p. m. in midweek. Report has it that the husbands rallied with their wives in the evening to form another benefit crowd and amply round out the day and the exchequer by a second social gathering at the Curtis home. If there's a finishing touch needed, the Lomans can apply it!

Colonel Fletcher has been a resident and constant worker in San Diego county for the past 48 years, during which time he has done more to develop land, water and highways than any other man in the county. He has been actively engaged in civic and welfare enterprises, and his efforts along those lines have been outstanding.

Colonel Fletcher is a self made man, father of ten children who are grown—every one of whom is a real asset to the community.

He stands for a strict business administration, and if sent to Sacramento will carry on the state's business in the same efficient manner in which he has successfully conducted his own business enterprises.

In a platform which he proposes to follow he states that he will endeavor to obtain state or government funds to refinance Mattoon or other advalorem districts, so that sufferers therein may have relief and save their property. He favors a moratorium in taxes on homes and farms and will assist in any legislation to protect the small property owner.

He has worked for, and will continue to work for state funds to assist in building a suitable road to the observatory site on Palomar mountain and will lend every effort to assist the directors of Caltech in bringing the observatory to San Diego county.

He will diligently work for a full college rating for our state college and defend our educational system along the present high standards under which it is now being conducted. He vigorously supports the Townsend Old Age pension plan pending before Congress and favors unemployment insurance to prevent a repetition of future tragedies caused by the present depression.

As Colonel Fletcher has been actively engaged in the wholesale produce business and has had experience in raising winter vegetables in San Diego county for the past 40 years, he is, therefore, familiar with the problems of the farmer and will use every effort to protect his interests.

During all the years Colonel Fletcher has been in this county his entire activities have been for its best interests, and such a man as he will certainly give to San Diego county the very best results if he goes up to Sacramento as our representative.

RADIO ADDRESS OF PRESIDENT IS ELOQUENT BUT VAGUE—LABOR DEMANDS CHANGES.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

President Roosevelt

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S latest radio talk with his fellow citizens was well written, well delivered and peculiarly vague as to his future intentions. He sought to reassure business and labor, both of which are questioning him anxiously, but he made no definite replies to their categorical queries. His one specific statement was that within a month he would seek to negotiate a truce between two large groups of employers and large groups of employees through which there would be a cessation of the strikes that have been disrupting the nation's business. He said he would ask the representatives of those forces to agree temporarily on questions of wages, hours and working conditions, and that with such agreements in force he expected further adjustments would be made peacefully, through governmental or private mediation.

"I shall not ask either employers or employees permanently to lay aside the weapons common to industrial war," he added. "But I shall ask both groups to give a fair trial to peaceful methods of adjusting their conflicts of opinion and interest, and to experiment for a reasonable time with measures suitable to civilize our industrial civilization." By way of reply to the appeals of many business, industrial and financial leaders that the more radical measures of the administration's program be abandoned, Mr. Roosevelt declared the New Deal is to go on. To the questions of those leaders concerning balancing of the budget, government expenses, further devaluation of the dollar or return to the gold standard, he made no reply. However, he did declare himself in favor of a system of business based on private profit. Then he said:

"I am not for a return to that definition of liberty under which for many years a free people were being gradually regimented into the service of the privileged few. I prefer and I am sure you prefer that broader definition of liberty under which we are moving forward to greater freedom, to greater security for the average man than has ever known before in the history of America."

Concerning the NRA, the President gave praise to General Johnson and said the national recovery administration was entering its second phase, "which is in turn a period of preparation for legislation which will determine its permanent form." He admitted there was a question as to the wisdom of some of the devices employed during the first phase of the NRA, but declared the attacks on the constitutionality of many of the things his administration has done. "We are not," he said, "frightened by reactionary lawyers of political editors. All these cries have been heard before."

Near the beginning of his address, the President said:

"I am happy to report that after years of uncertainty, culminating in the collapse of the spring of 1933, we are bringing order out of the old chaos with a greater certainty of the employment of labor at a reasonable wage and of more business at a fair profit. These governmental and industrial developments hold promise of new achievements for the nation."

First formal response to the President's speech came from the National Association of Manufacturers, which urged him to issue a proclamation for a "truce on industrial warfare" during which existing employment relations would be continued, and challenged the American Federation of Labor to take like action. Its statement said:

"The President will find employers willing to sit down with him, as he proposes, to devise means for ending the constant series of strikes which have been one of the major obstacles to recovery."

Green and Morrison, respectively president and secretary of the federation, said this was a subterfuge and that the manufacturers should first publicly announce they would obey the decisions of constituted authorities, especially concerning discrimination and collective bargaining.

WHILE President William Green and some other leaders of the American Federation of Labor, just convened in San Francisco, expressed approval of what Mr. Roosevelt said in his radio address, many others prominent in the federation are far from satisfied with the way things are going. The executive council's annual report devoted pages to an analysis of the effect of the NRA upon the interests of labor. Almost without exception, the effects were found either directly harmful or at least unsatisfactory.

The criticism was directed at the workings of the recovery program, in actual operation. The NRA and the New Deal itself were not condemned. But the committee indicted the program on these main grounds:

That it has failed to increase the purchasing power of workers.
That because it has failed to reduce hours of labor sufficiently it has also failed to create a satisfactory number of new jobs.

That its compliance machinery is ineffective, with the result that violations of the spirit of the codes are easily accomplished and quite general.

Labor does not have proper representation in either code enforcement or administration.

"In one way," the report says, pointing to what seems to be viewed as the only satisfactory accomplishment thus far under the NRA, "codes have fulfilled expectations. They have with few exceptions wiped out child labor."

Discussing the alleged failure to increase purchasing power of workers the report says that in 16 industrial groups surveyed in the year ending with July, 1934, employment increased 9.8 per cent; individual weekly wages 6.4 per cent and the cost of living 6.3 per cent.

"This meant that the employees in these industries are at the same position regarding purchasing power as they held before the NRA," the committee commented.

The report finds also that minimum wages fixed in codes have been regarded by employers as maximum wages and that the wages of skilled workers have accordingly been reduced to compensate for increase wages to the unskilled.

The committee estimates that 10,500,000 people still are unemployed, although of these approximately 2,000,000 are cared for temporarily by the CWA and various government construction projects.

The council said organized labor must be "forever opposed" to "currency inflation as the method of recovery" and it viewed the increased national debt with "alarm and with misgiving."

ORGANIZED business and the President are not at all satisfied with each other. Business leaders are nervous, and Mr. Roosevelt feels that they have too many "inhibitions" and are not doing what they should to aid recovery. The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, seeking a clear statement of the President's future intentions, sent him a list of questions on expenditures, budget balancing, currency stabilization and the government's part in business, politely requesting categorical replies. Mr. Roosevelt received the questionnaire with a smile and a joke, and there was no indication of his intention to answer it.

It was revealed in Washington that the President also received not long ago a set of resolutions adopted at a secret meeting of 120 leading industrialists and financiers. These men asserted that the policies of the New Deal, along with the uncertainties of the future, are throttling economic recovery in the United States. The resolutions were not intended for publication and the President made no mention of them in his press conferences.

Still another hard rap at the New Deal came in the form of a statement by the federal advisory council, composed of leading bankers. It was contained in a set of recommendations for the federal reserve system and severely criticized the administration's monetary and economic policies, demanding a return to what the council considers sound principles.

GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON steps out of the picture and the NRA is turned over to Donald R. Richberg and other "left wing" members of the New Deal management. President Roosevelt announced the greater part of the reorganization plan for the national recovery body, naming first the policy making board, with Richberg as its chairman and Secretary Ickes, Secretary Perkins, Harry L. Hopkins and Chester Davis as members. A fifth member was yet to be selected, he to be the chairman of the new administrative board. Five other members of this latter body are S. Clay Williams, head of the Reynolds Tobacco company; Arthur D. White, president of Dun & Bradstreet; Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Leon C. Marshall, labor specialist; and Prof. Walton H. Hamilton of Yale. Two ex-officio members are Blackwell Smith, assistant general counsel of NRA, and Leon Henderson, chief of the NRA division of research and planning under Johnson.

The judicial branch of the NRA was still under consideration. Mr. Roosevelt indicated that its duties might be assigned to a special department of the Department of Justice.

RESIGNATION of General Johnson, as accepted by the President, is not effective until October 15. Until then he will be busy compiling his final report and also, it is said, writing the story of his life.

This is not the time or place to estimate General Johnson's achievements as administrator of the NRA which was largely his own creation. He certainly worked hard and accomplished much, whether for good or evil. His mistakes were admittedly glaring, and not the least of them was his recent assertion that during his administration he had been in close touch with Justice Brandeis of the Supreme court. As that tribunal will have to pass on the constitutionality of NRA before long, this statement created a sensation and was dismaying to the friends of Justice Brandeis. Of course, the jurist could take no notice of it. The "low down" is said to be that Johnson did consult the justice when he was formulating the NRA and received some informal advice which he disregarded, and that later Mr. Brandeis told him he had better resign.

MAXIM LITVINOV told the League of Nations assembly that Russia still hopes for the establishment of a permanent peace conference in which the United States is a participant, for the consolidation of peace movements. SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR ICKES, as head of the federal public works administration, announced an ambitious family housing project for Chicago which, at a cost of $12,500,000, will abolish a "slum area" of 37 city blocks on the southwest side and replace demolished buildings with small apartment houses for 3,000 families. Condemnation proceedings were started in the Federal court in Chicago, and Mr. Ickes said if the property owners are reasonable in their demands the project will go through speedily. The area to be rehabilitated is inhabited now almost entirely by persons of Italian descent and, far from being a typical "slum," contains numerous neat, well-kept homes and several large apartment houses. The plan of the PWA for its rebuilding is very similar to housing projects in Moscow and Vienna, with the government supplying social and nursery facilities as well as dwellings.

MISS GRACE ABBOTT, for years one of the government's most faithful and useful servants, has resigned her position as director of the children's bureau, to the grief of her associates in Washington and the regret of every one who knows about her fine work there. Miss Abbott now becomes professor of public welfare administration in the University of Chicago and editor of the Social Service Review.

INTERESTING, though not highly important, is the report that comes from Vienna that Mustapha Kemal Pasha, dictator-president of Turkey, may marry one of the four unmarried daughters of King Zog of Albania. Zog is to visit Ankara soon and the engagement may be announced then. Kemal, who is fifty-seven years old, divorced his first wife, Latife Hanoum, in 1925, and is said to have expressed a wish to re-marry. King Zog's marriageable daughters range in age from twenty-three to twenty-six. The Albanian royal family, like Kemal, is of the Moslem faith.

Rumors of another almost royal marriage come from Paris. The Parisier Tagblatt, German refugee newspaper, says Chancellor Hitler contemplates taking as his bride a German princess, one of the family of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha which is allied to the crowns of half a dozen European countries. It adds that the fuhrer at the same time will assume the title of "duke of the Germans."

SEVEN hundred thousand German peasants gathered at Bueckeburg hill for their national harvest festival celebration and were told by Chancellor Adolf Hitler that their independence as a nation was perfectly safe. Said he: "The latest prophecy is that lack of currency for the purchase of foreign raw material will bring about our collapse. They will never beat us down. Under the worst circumstances they will make us more independent." Reiterating his government's opposition to war, the fuhrer said: "We Nazis regard honor and life as indivisible. We have told the world what is the honest wish of every German—Germany and the German people desire nothing but peace. Nevertheless, they will never relinquish equal rights."

BECAUSE of bad treatment of Jews by the German Nazis there was loud objection to American participation in the 1936 Olympic Games in Berlin. Avery Brundage, president of the Amateur Athletic union, went to Germany to investigate, and on his recommendation the American Olympic committee decided to accept the German invitation.

In his report Brundage, in addition to giving the assurance he had received from German sports leaders that there would be no discrimination, pointed out that Jewish sports leaders in Germany were satisfied that they will have full opportunity to train and prepare for the Olympic games.

EIGHT per cent boost in wages, amounting to more than $10,000,000 a year, has been granted their employees by the four big packing concerns of Chicago, Swift, Armour, Wilson and Cudahy, and their example is followed by packing companies in other cities.

The wage increases were granted as a result of negotiations between the companies and their plant labor conference boards. Whether the increases were the full demands of the workers or were compromises was not stated. The plant boards are established at all points at which the companies operate and they are composed of employee representatives, half of whom are chosen by the workers themselves and half by the managements.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER DISCOVERS SOMETHING STARTLING

NOT far from the Old Orchard grew a thorn-tree which Peter often passed. He never had paid particular attention to it. One morning he stopped to rest under it. Happening to look up, he saw a most astonishing and startling sight. Fastened on the sharp thorns of one of the branches were three big grasshoppers, a big moth, two big caterpillars, a lizard, a small mouse, and a young English sparrow.

Do you wonder that Peter thought he must be dreaming? He couldn't

"You're wrong, Johnny Chuck. You are altogether wrong."

Imagine how those creatures could have become fastened on those long, sharp thorns. It was a dreadful sight. Somehow it gave him an uncomfortable feeling. He didn't want to stay around there, yet it was hard to tear himself away. However, finally he did and hurried over to the Old Orchard, bubbling over with desire to tell someone of the strange and dreadful thing he had seen in the thorn-tree and to try to find out what it meant.

Sitting on his doorstep under the big apple tree in the far corner of the Old Orchard he found Johnny Chuck and at once hurried to tell him the strange news. Johnny didn't interrupt once. When Peter had finished his story, Johnny quite frankly told him that never had he heard of such a thing, and that he thought Peter must have been dreaming and didn't know it.

Now, Peter knew that he hadn't been dreaming. He knew that he had seen with his very own eyes that dreadful sight in the thorn-tree and he grew quite indignant with Johnny Chuck for doubting him. But Johnny persisted in refusing to believe and repeated that he was certain Peter must have dreamed it.

Do YOU Know—

That the first wearer of a top hat was John Hetherington, who strutted the streets of London in 1797, and created such excitement that he was arrested for disturbing the peace. The summons, accused him "of wearing in a public thoroughfare a tall structure of shiny lustrous, calculated to frighten timid folks."

"You're wrong, Johnny Chuck. You are altogether wrong. Peter hasn't been dreaming at all," said Skimmer the Swallow, who lives in a hole in the tree just above Johnny Chuck's house and had been sitting where he overheard everything.

"Well, if you know so much about it, please explain," said Johnny Chuck rather crossly.

"It's simple enough," replied Skimmer. "Peter just happened to find the storehouse of Butcher the Shrike. It isn't a very pleasant sight, I must admit, but one must give Butcher credit for being smart enough to lay up a store of food when it is plentiful. When you come to think about it, I don't know why one who eats that kind of food shouldn't store it up the same as some others store up other kinds of foods. Of course, those things won't keep long, but they will keep from one meal to another, and probably that is all Butcher wants."

"Who is Butcher the Shrike," demanded Peter. "He's new to me."

By ED WYNN...
The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:
A friend of mine told me he knew a married woman 63 years of age who sleeps in the same room with cats. Do you believe this?

Truly yours,
X. ACKTING.

Answer: Sure, I believe it. Your friend probably is referring to Mrs. Katz.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I live in a town and to go to work I must take a ferry over the river. Why doesn't the city government build a bridge?

Yours truly,
MRS. SIPPE.

Answer: They're afraid it will make the people cross.
Dear Mr. Wynn:
I am eight years old and am in the fourth grade in school. I have to write a story about a "Southern Planter." What does the teacher mean by a "Southern Planter?"

Yours truly,
I. PUPIL.

Answer: A "Southern Planter," my child, is an undertaker who operates only in the South.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
There is so much talk about "Society" changing in the last twenty-five years. If this is true, can you describe the change?

Yours truly,
I. M. A. CLIMBER.

Answer: Twenty-five years ago you married into "Society." Today you divorce into it.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
On my recent trip through the West the train stopped at a little town in Arizona. The conductor of our train pointed to a rough looking man on the platform and told me that the man he was pointing at had killed twenty men. Do you think cowboys are really as bad as that?

Truly yours,
O. PINSPACES.

Answer: No, I don't. In fact the fellow you saw in Arizona was not a cowboy but a taxi driver from the East who was in Arizona on his vacation.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I gave my son, who is twelve years of age, a job to break a big rock which was in our back yard. He hammered away at it for four hours without any result. I took the hammer and broke the rock with the first blow.

YOU AWAY?

By ANNE CAMPBELL

YOU'VE gone away? Ah, no, you are still here.
In every room that treasures your sweet grace.
I linger in your chair and feel you near.

Your mirror seems to miss your absent face.
The curtains meet the breeze, their creamy lace
Waving like phantom arms to bid you come.

Your loved books wait in their accustomed place.
Outside there is the town's familiar hum.

You've gone away? Ah, no, you could not go
Beyond my heart's pavilion. You are there
With the bright lamp of friendliness aglow.

Sending its beams to light me up life's stair.

You will be with me whether joy or care
Is my companion in the days to be.
Absent or present, you are everywhere!

You are away, perhaps, but not from me!

THE VERSATILE BANANA

AS the banana is a fruit always on the market, it is a constant source of comfort in time of emergency when a hurry-up dish is necessary.

Banana Whip.

Cook three mashed bananas in a double boiler with one-third of a cupful of sugar and one tablespoonful of lemon juice until scalded. Add a few drops of vanilla, a pinch of salt, and cool. Whip one cupful of heavy cream until firm, then add the banana mixture gradually. Set aside to chill. Serve piled high in sherbet glasses with chopped pistachio nuts for garnish.

Banana Tapioca Cream.

Peel and scrape three bananas and cut into slices. Prepare a custard by scalding two cupfuls of milk with three tablespoonfuls of tapioca and cook until the tapioca is clear. Add two egg yolks mixed with three tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-third of a teaspoonful of salt. Cook for two minutes, cool and add a few drops of vanilla. Beat the egg whites until stiff, adding three tablespoonfuls of sugar and a tablespoonful of lemon juice. Pour one-third of the custard into the serving dish, cover with bananas, add more custard and more bananas. Pour the remaining custard over the remaining egg whites and top the dish. Garnish with banana slices.

Boston Banana Cream Pie.

Break a large egg into a measuring cup, add softened butter (two tablespoonfuls), fill the cup with milk. Turn into a mixing bowl, and beat with one and one-half cups of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in two layer pans. Whip a cupful of cream, sweeten to taste, flavor with almond, and spread over the layers, cover with sliced bananas. Top the upper layer with cream sprinkled with chopped nuts.

Banana Pancakes.

TWO-PIECE FROCK HAS REAL CHARM

Pattern 1922

This is one of those tremendously chic two-piece frocks which do their stuff so quietly and subtly you have to stop and look carefully to find out where all that style really comes from. Front pleats that all turn in, are one of its clever little tricks, and pleated sleeves that grow into a devastatingly smart epaulet on the shoulders are another. The rest of it is mostly very good proportions and a demure and becoming little round collar. The original was made of red and white checked gingham and worn with navy blue accessories. It was stunning!

Pattern 1922 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 5 yards 36-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York city.

"No," said Mrs. Chuggins. "Nearly every time I go out in the car policemen to whom I have never been introduced don't hesitate to speak to me."

THE PRESCRIPTION FOR BREAKING SHACKLES

Edwin Markham, that sainted dean of letters, must have been thinking of the Townsend Old-Age Pension Plan when he said that all we send into the lives of others comes back into our own; for there is such a similarity of meaning in both.

Strange as it may seem, most major ideas as usual come from California. Just now the nation is aroused over this plan which was made public about nine months ago. A slender built person with luster in his eyes and of a philosophical mien, rose up in defense of his country suffering from a lasting depression. Dr. F. E. Townsend of Long Beach, diagnosed the nation's illness and prescribed an antidote that has stirred the country, including the entire 48 states, to a point of marvelous interest and has brought to Dr. Townsend great renown.

It has gone so far that the next move is to get Congressional action and which if favorably received is believed will be the only panacea for breaking the shackled nation of its most severe poverty known in all history. The old saying must be true that the people deserve the sort of government they get, therefore it is up to the wise law-makers to delve deeply and seriously into the realm of our governmental structure and give us the needed legislation, which millions believe to be the Townsend Old-Age Pension Plan.

By making every citizen over 60 years of age a custodian of $200 per month, to be spent and not hoarded, is the only feasible plan to keep currency in circulation; it is so simple to understand that even a school child can see the advantage. The industrial machinery will commence its work; thousands will get every dad's job, while the dads keep busy spending their two-hundred each month, thus reverting money into channels of trade to pay the fellows who hold their jobs.

This is indeed a revolving plan that will scare away the dread of poverty, put new hope in the hearts of young and old alike, efface those "cow-tracks" from the countenance and brighten the eyes of the old who will see a haven of joy ahead and not a pauper's destiny.

The tragic story of Edith Cavell, English nurse, will be remembered as one of the saddest, if not one of the most dramatic events of the World War, with her execution at sunrise by a German firing squad, October 12, 1915. Last Friday was the 19th anniversary of Miss Cavell. Her fame became known in 1900 when she established a training school at Brussels, Belgium, and became its head in 1906. When the World War broke out she converted her institution into a soldier's hospital for the wounded. When German occupation of Brussels took place, she was made prisoner, arrested August 5th, 1915, tried and executed, giving her life for her deeds of philanthropy. Her bravery and love of humanity was without parallel. In London's Trafalgar Square, stands her statue in memory of her humanitarian service.

The human machine is a marvelous piece of mysterious action. To keep alert and alive there is great need of carrying out certain cardinal principles that make up our social being. We are made up with the physical, mental and moral and each one must be exercised to be fruitful. We exercise the moral or spiritual through meditation and inspiring zeal built on a well grounded faith; the mental side is cultivated by a knowledge gained from instructive reading and social intercourse, and the physical is benefited by systematic exercise. No one thing, for attaining the best all-round good, counts more than a brisk daily walk. Most of us err in our neglect in keeping alive and fit, all three of these important requisites. For small cost of our time, why not look to a more abundant life, gained by so simple a regime.

Life is just one perpetual experience from the cradle to the grave. It is a university of learning. The important thing to learn in this life school is not so much the profits in possessions but in life annuities that endure and make for happiness. This is the philosophy of life. Too many get so little out of life, that they might wonder why they are living. Others are drinking at the fountain of eternal blessings, and every day is a holiday of anticipation, where good is found in everything. It is very hard to get along with a pessimistic person; one who is always casting reflection. The trouble with a lot of us is not so much that we are not being appreciated, as that we are being "put up with." When we get out of the rut and take the right perspective our wounds will soon heal and we will be purged of our woes.

From all reports, California has a climate adapted to poultry culture far superior to any state in the entire Union. Ocean temperature with mountain air combine in a most health-giving condition that makes for contented hens, and this counts as the greatest asset, even greater than proper feeding, for the best egg production results. Of all varieties of poultry, the humble hen leads them all as an earning power. The total value of chickens consumed on farms alone in 1933 was $135,705,000, while the eggs sold the same year were valued at $253,373,000. A large portion of this amount belongs to California alone.

Next Saturday, October 20th, the duck hunting season opens with a bang! While it will be a 11-week period, only Saturday and Sunday of each week will it be lawful to hunt and shoot ducks, or a total of 22 shooting days, with a daily bag limit of 12 ducks. Of all outings in the hunting line, that of going after ducks seems to stir the sporting blood of the hunter more than any of the rest. With the days shortening and the time limited to sunrise to sunset, the hunter-enthusiast will have to plan being on the job with all dexterity and promptness.

Columbus Day, just celebrated, is the 42nd anniversary of the landing of Christopher Columbus in a frail frigate and with a small crew of sailors. Likewise America was discovered,

HAS MAN FREE WILL?

A special meeting of the Ocean Beach Theosophical club will be held on Thursday evening, October 25 at 7:30 p. m., in the civic center building on Abbott street. Miss Grace Knoche of the Theosophical headquarters will be the speaker of the evening leading a discussion on the very interesting subject—"Has man free will?"

Free will is a god-like power within us, but the wrong exercise of this divine faculty resulting in a conflict of wills and along the rungs of the ascending Ladder of Life is undoubtedly the cause of the evil on earth as far as human beings are concerned.

All interested will be most welcome and questions invited.

VETERAN SAYS BUDDIES SHOULD SUPPORT WHELAN

October 5, 1934
The Editor, Ocean Beach News,
Ocean Beach, California

Dear Sir:

May I use the columns of your paper to urge that all veterans of the county of San Diego unite to assist in the re-election of Thomas Whelan as district attorney of San Diego county.

Not only has Thomas Whelan been fair to the veterans of San Diego county in employing as his deputies and in his department of investigation veterans who are members of the American Legion, the Disabled American Veterans and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, but he has in the conduct of his office, been extremely fair and courteous to all individual veterans and the veterans' organizations.

The administration in the district attorney's office prior to the time that Mr. Whelan was elected to the office in 1931 advised the supervisors that it was improper for the county to employ a veteran's service officer. In February of 1931, less than one month after Thomas Whelan took office, he made a thorough study of the law and of the practice in other counties of the state, and advised the Board of Supervisors of the county of San Diego that it was proper and legal for the county of San Diego to maintain a veteran's service officer, and at that time the Board of Supervisors created the position of and appointed a "Director of Veterans' Welfare". This office has been maintained by the county since February of 1931 and has been of great service and assistance to the veterans of San Diego county, particularly to those indigent circumstances and in need of relief.

I happen to know these things because I was appointed veteran's service officer to open the office for the county of San Diego. During the time that I held the position as veteran's service officer for San Diego I received the utmost cooperation from the district attorney's office under Thomas Whelan.

Yours very sincerely,
(Signed) Chas. A. Stevenot

Dr. de Purucker To Lecture Sunday Afternoon

Gottfried de Purucker, international leader of the Theosophical Society, will deliver the public forum lecture at the society's headquarters on Point Loma next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. In response to many requests, special motor coach service will be available for this meeting. The bus will leave the Broadway entrance to the Union building, between 2nd and 3rd Sts., at 2:15 p. m., and will return there to immediately after the Theosophical leader's lecture.

In a recently issued statement to his membership, Dr. de Purucker said in part:

"Writers like Ammianus Marcellinus have transmitted to us descriptions of conditions prevailing in the Roman Empire at the time of its fall—strangely, amazingly alike unto what prevails in the world today. I do not mean to suggest that our present civilization is in the same perilous condition as was the Roman Imperium at the time of which I speak. I call your attention to the amazing similarity and say that the same dangers threaten us now that then threatened imperial Rome. Today the chances are greater for a spiritual reaction towards sanity and safety, and I believe it will come in time."

OCEAN BEACH SCHOOL

Gardner Kirk who was a student at Ocean Beach last year came back recently. He has been to Virginia, New York and a great many other states. A new boy, Billy Gates, has just entered the H2 grade.

The Girl Scouts, troop 54, are having an unusually good time this year. The 2nd class scouts came back from a week end at Camp Desatoya. Some of them expect to march in the Armistice Day parade.

Warren Stone entered the L6 grade Tuesday. The Stone family have recently moved to Ocean Beach from San Francisco.

Miss Rankin has invited Miss Shea's reading class to visit the library on Thursday at 11:15 and all the children of the group are most happy to have been invited.

The PTA contest was won by Mr. Wilson's 6th grade. They will receive a prize of $2 for their room. The total number of PTA members was 28 and Miss Barnes room came in second with a total of 24 members. The contest was very close and Miss Barnes room was leading until the last day of the contest.

JUDGE CURTIS SENDS DEGENERATES TO HIGHER COURT

While most people know that several dangerous degenerates have not been apprehended in San Diego, few are familiar with the large number captured each year who have been prosecuted, convicted and are now serving time in penal institutions.

Fifty-six alleged degenerates have appeared for preliminary hearing since 1931 in Justice Court before Judge Everett N. Curtis, 55 of whom he bound over to stand trial in superior court, it was revealed today. Insufficient evidence was responsible for the single dismissal.

Included in this number were those charged with attack, violation of the Juvenile Court Law and illicit traffickers in dope. While Judge Curtis is known as a humanitarian and for interesting himself in the reformation of wayward youths and first offenders, the degenerate type of criminal receives no leniency in his court.

A macedoine of fruits, served in sherbet cups to accompany the roast meat or fowl, requires no elaborate preparation and adds measurably to the eye as well as the appetite appeal of the menu.

Macedoine of Fruits

2 cups sugar
2 cups water
2 tablespoons brandy
2 tablespoons liqueur (any flavor)
2 cups fruit, fresh or canned

Make a syrup of sugar and water, boiling for a few minutes. Add brandy and liqueur. Chill. Cut fruit into small pieces. Mix fruit and syrup and let stand 2 hours in the refrigerator before serving. This makes four sherbets.

Thinking Rightly About Business

MUCH thought is given to the question of business. For most people, supply seems to be dependent upon the state of business. If it is good, supply appears to be adequate; and this condition is thought to be an influence in helping the individual to live happily and to have good health. Seeing, then, that the state of one's business is believed to greatly contribute to one's sense of harmony, we should see the necessity of looking at this question from the right standpoint.

Some individuals look at this subject more hopefully than do some others. Many people are beginning to see that to take the stand that business is bad, and that it is going to get worse, is certainly the wrong way to think about it. Many have stopped using the word "depression," feeling that the continual use of it has a bad effect upon the general outlook.

Business is primarily mental. In fact, all human experience is the outward expression of a state of consciousness. Christian Science reveals God, infinite good, as the only Mind. If the individual accepts this fact, he can learn how to reject all wrong thoughts. The acceptance of God, infinite good, as the only Mind opens his thought to receive the good and perfect ideas which come from God, divine Mind.

The only real business is the activity which comes from God. The one infinite, spiritual reaction is always expressing the perfect activity which comes from the creator. Wonderfully uplifting is the realization of the truth set forth in this statement by Mary Baker Eddy: "Mind is the source of all movement, and there is no inertia to retard or check its perpetual and harmonious action" (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, p. 283). For several years the world has been accepting the general belief that something has interfered with harmonious activity; and both time and effort have been expended in trying to ascertain what is the trouble. One who accepts the fact that omnipotent Mind "is the source of all movement" can never believe in depression as real. Having gained the true idea of activity, one can refuse to accept the belief that any mortal supposition has interfered, or ever can interfere, with harmonious activity.

A business man might be told by several of his salesmen that they found sales very poor, and he might learn that someone in a similar line of business had failed. He might let anxiety and fear enter his thought. This, of course, would not be helpful. On the other hand, if he refused to accept wrong thoughts about business and held to the fact that real activity comes from divine Mind, and is always perfect, his affairs would improve; and to this extent he would help to improve conditions in general.

Since harmonious activity comes from God, divine Mind, and the real man, the true selfhood of all, is the image and likeness of divine Mind, the real man's business is always good, and spiritual man is ever rejoicing in harmonious activity. The great Way-shower, Christ Jesus, recognized that spiritual man ever reflects God, for he said, "The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise." One who accepts the true idea of activity is able to rise above the beliefs of fatigue, monotony, and worry; for the realization of the fact that man reflects divine Mind gives joyous strength, freedom, and expectancy of good.

Since business is in reality the activity which comes from God, divine Principle, fear, dishonesty, greed, selfishness, and lack of ability are no part of real business. This knowledge enables one to refuse to accept these falsities as having power to operate in his thought and affairs; and he sees instead honesty, efficiency, freedom, love, and joy. The realization of the truth brings one's human business into harmony with God's law, and destroys whatever is unlike good.—The Christian Science Monitor.

Mexico at Fair

This is an every-day street scene in the Mexican village at the World's Fair in Chicago. Fifteen foreign villages offer the visitor the equivalent of a tour of the world in a day or two at the exposition this year. Low travel costs and added Free Fair features make a Fair vacation cheaper this summer.

Point Loma PTA

The membership campaign for 1934-35 is now in full swing and the membership chairman with her aides, together with the treasurer are busy counting and checking those half dollars which have been sent in.

With the October meeting just over, the November meeting still ahead, one would think that those busy PTA workers could take a resting spell. But the old faithfuls and a few new volunteers have been called upon to do their part toward the Community Chest, so that is what they are doing this week.

Beginning the first Friday in November the Point Loma PTA will sponsor a series of dances to be held at the Assembly hall. Student organizations will share in the profits, if any. But large profits are not expected since the whole idea is to provide wholesome entertainment, well conducted dances, at a minimum price. There are quite a number of students who have expressed themselves very enthusiastically when they were told about it, and it is hoped that these dances may provide for a community need. Any other young people from the city, State College students, and others, may attend.

"Gerard!" Calloway shrugged his scorn. "You make me laugh! In the first place, suppose Gerard should stick to the proposition long enough to begin work—he won't, but we'll let it go for the sake of argument—where would he get a crew to log for him? There isn't a man in this town who would dare work for Gerard if I said 'No!'"

"What's that?"

The question rang like a pistol shot. Calloway shifted his eyes from the girl's face to stare insultingly at the man in the doorway.

"I can't seem to take a step without running into you, can I, Gerard? Try to put me out of this house, just try! You won't catch me off my guard again. Perhaps you've appointed yourself Miss Schuyler's guardian, though?"

The sneering tone whitened Rodney Gerard's face. His eyes frightened Prudence. She took a quick step toward him. He shook his head. His smile was strained as he reassured:

"Okay. I shan't make a row when your brother is directly over this room. What do you want, Calloway?"

"What business is that of yours?"

"It is his business!" Prudence turned to Gerard. "He came to warn me that if he did not cut my timber no one else should."

"Boy! So racketeering has struck this small village?"

Calloway's eyes retreated into their caverns. "Call it racketeering, it's all right with me. The fact remains that you'll be unable to hire labor if I say the word. I'll give you and Miss Schuyler one more chance. Think it over. Contract with me to handle your timber and I'll treat you fair. If you don't—I'll turn away with a suggestive laugh."

"You're his—our answer. I'll cut that timber. Try to stop me, just try!"

"Oh, I'll try."

Calloway set his hat at a rakish angle.

"Think it over! Think it over!" he advised, before he banged the door behind him.

Prue's eyes were bright with indignation. "I felt as little importance in that contest as a cheer leader without a megaphone, and I am supposed to be your partner. Can he do it? Can he prevent you?"

"Can he! Just watch me, girl, watch me. 'Down with the racketeer!' will be my battle cry. I have made up my mind to get out that timber, and when I decide to do a thing I do it. It will take something bigger than Len Calloway to stop me."

There was a disturbing light in his eyes and a vibrant note in his voice as he added:

"That isn't all I've made up my mind to do either, but it is enough to announce for a starter."

CHAPTER IV

Prudence Schuyler, in dark blue linen slacks and short-sleeved green shirt, knelt beside the border of the garden back of the red brick house. A shadow fell across the earth. She called over her shoulder:

"Fill that pail with sand, will you,

"Gerard!" Calloway Shrugged His Scorn. "You Make Me Laugh!"

Mr. Si? The directions which came with the lilies stressed the importance of a handful under each bulb."

She measured a hole with a short ruler in her white cotton-gloved hand. "Six inches. Correct." She sat back on her heels as a pail was set down beside her.

"Thanks lots. These lily bulbs will be but a voice crying in a wilderness of bare ground, but it's a start. Thank heaven for my imagination. Giant larkspurs, columbine, lilies in succession, hollyhocks, phlox, with mists and drifts of white gypsophylla. Nice of me to treat you to a preview, isn't it? I'll make it a dream when my ship comes in and I can buy dozens of plants."

"No need of waiting for a ship to realize that dream."

Prudence looked up in startled surprise. "Just where did you drop from? I thought you were Mr. Si."

Rodney Gerard turned a bushel basket bottom side up for a seat. "You don't have to tell me that. 'Whatta mean is,' you never favor me with such cordiality. But we won't go into that now."

Prudence dug at the earth with a trowel. She met his clear amused blue eyes with troubled brown ones. He was so darn likable. Almost he made her believe that a rich playboy might be honorable, might be true to that 'forsaking all others' clause in the marriage service. She demanded hurriedly:

"Why did you come? Is Calloway making more trouble for you? You really shouldn't have rushed him out of Mrs. Puffer's as you did the other day. He had as much right there as you and I."

"He was bullying you."

"What a fire-eater you are! You can't fight my battles."

"Can't I? I'll make a stab at fighting your timber battles. What are you doing? I know where you can get all the plants you want for this border. I know a place where they are throwing them away this minute."

"Throwing—this minute!" Prudence was on her feet. "Come on, lead me to it."

Gerard caught her hand. Started on a run. Out of the garden. Around the house.

"Is it far—I'll tell—"

"Don't stop for anything or you may lose them. Action, girl, action!" He pulled open the door of his roadster standing at the entrance to the brick walk. "Hop in!"

"But I must tell Macky or Dave where I'm going. Where am I going?"

"We're bound for High Ledges. The velvet moss. It was bordered on each side by trees. Their breath was resinous, their green was almost black, their height incalculable, their grandeur gave a sense of eternity. She gazed at them in awed unbelief.

"Do I own trees like that?"

"Hundred of them."

"Must those magnificent things come down?"

"Yes, for the good of the forest, I am told. The mature trees are taking the place of productive timber. Besides, there are a thousand bucks or more for you going to waste, so long as they stand."

"Practicality vs. sentiment. I'm not a practical person when it comes to beauty. I hear voices. Coming this way."

"The nurserymen."

"I'm going before they disturb the peace and beauty of this place."

"But the plants? Don't you want to select them?"

"Let the men save me anything they can spare. I shall love having them— from here." She looked down into the hushed garden.

"I don't know how anyone could be false or wicked with this heavenly spot to come to, Rodney Gerard."

He followed her along the trail, odoriferous of spruce and pine, dimly lit, throbby with unspoken thoughts.

"Go on to the roadster, Prue. I'll give the men directions about the plants. I won't be long."

Prudence glanced at her wrist watch as she stepped into the shining black car. Almost noon. David would think her lost. Some time he must see that heavenly garden. She would never forget it. It would help when she was engulfed in a tide of bitterness to think of the shades of husband and wife who perhaps walked there, hand in hand, in the dusky twilight.

"The idea, Miss Schuyler! Didn't they tell you that I was on the rear terrace, snipping off a few dead blos-

THE STORY FROM THE BEGINNING

Prudence Schuyler comes from New York to Prosperity Farm, inherited from her uncle, to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, whose health has been broken by tragedy. The second day on her farm Prue falls from the barn loft into the arms of Rodney Gerard, rich young man, who lives at High Ledges on the neighboring farm. There is at once a mutual attraction between the two, but Prudence decides to maintain a cool attitude toward him. She suspects men since her sister's husband ran away with her brother's wife. Len Calloway, a rival of Gerard, tries to buy the timber off Prue's land, but she dislikes his conceited attitude and contracts with Rod to dispose of the trees. On the evening Prue is expecting David from New York she is visited by Mrs. Walter Gerard and her thirteen-year-old daughter, Jean. They are hateful, curious persons and leave Prue rankled.

nurserymen are there with bulbs and plant for the Glen. They always thin a lot of perennials—no reason why you shouldn't have them."

"Is that where—"

"Where my mother and father are buried. You won't mind going, will you? It isn't in the least depressing."

"Mind! Of course not. Mrs. Si has told me about it. She says it is beautiful."

"Mother planned it. I try to keep it as she loved to see it."

They drove the rest of the way in silence. As they passed the vine-covered stone and oak house, Prudence gave a fleeting thought to Mrs. Walter Gerard's reaction were she to see her on the place with her "butterfly" brother-in-law. Punctiliously she had returned her first call within the time limit ordained by etiquette, and had been overjoyed to be told that she was not at home.

Gerard stopped the roadster at the entrance to a dusky green trail. He led the way as it loped gently down hill. At the top of three boulder steps he stopped.

"Look! The frost hasn't touched it yet."

The sheer beauty of the garden below caught at Prue's heart. Such a garden! Regale lilies, crimson-spotted white; pink-tinged lilies; mammoth zinnias in pastel colorings; spikes of purple monkshood; plumes of pale blue larkspur, a second blossoming; snowy drifts of gypsophylla; gladioli, pink, purple, mauve, white, amber, wine-red; clumps of Chinese forget-me-nots; sprays of pale yellow salpiglossis; tall dahlias, single, apricot colored. Water rilled gently over a ledge to tinkle into a fern-rimmed pool.

Rodney Gerard parted the ferns and crimson gladioli which almost obscured a bronze tablet set in a moss-grown boulder. She read the inscription. Whispered:

"How lovely! What profound silence! It sinks into one's soul. Can't you imagine the spirits of your father and mother walking here, hand in hand, in the cool evening? The place almost restores one's belief in faithfulness and love and—"

"There is faithfulness and love, Prue, lots of it. You only hear of the heartbreaks. You must believe it. I—"

"Don't! Please! Don't spoil it. Even the purple shadows cast by the moving clouds pass more softly here. How far does the forest stretch?"

"On and on to the Canadian line. We'll go back and I'll show you the direction in which The Hundreds lie."

A few feet beyond the top of the steps he stopped. "Your land lies to the east about half a mile from here."

Prue's eyes followed the narrowing perspective of a trail, carpeted with soms from the boxes, when you stopped at the house?"

Mrs. Walter Gerard had appeared as soundlessly as a wraith beside the car. The woman knew perfectly well that she hadn't been at the house, it was her way of making her feel like a trespasser, Prudence concluded hotly. She assured politely:

"It was a disappointment not to find you."

"But, my dear Miss Schuyler," Mrs. Walter winked—"did you really?" She broke off as her brother-in-law appeared on the trail. "Rodney, why have the nurserymen come today of all days? I can't have the Glen disturbed. I am entertaining some Garden clubs. I told you about it a week ago."

"Boy! I forgot! I'll stop them, Annie."

He sprinted up the trail. His sister-in-law called after him:

"I am expecting you to show my guests about, Rodney—" He disappeared in the dusky greenness without answering.

"Mother! Mother!" Jean dashed along the drive. "You're wanted on the 'phone, 'Portant."

"The idea! I hope it isn't a regret at the last moment, it might mean rearranging the luncheon tables."

Without so much as a word to Prudence, Annie Gerard fluttered toward the house. Jean dropped to the bank and regarded the girl in the roadster with her puckish eyes.

"I don't believe you've set your cap for Uncle Rod," she observed judicially. "What's setting your cap, anyway?"

Prudence shut her teeth hard to keep back a sharp answer. The child was merely repeating something she had overheard, something her mother had said probably, she wouldn't put it past her. Lucky she had said it. It would remind Prudence Schuyler of what constantly she was forgetting, that she was to treat Rodney Gerard with chill disdain. She said lightly:

"Speaking of caps, I love that floppy hat of yours, Jean."

The child pulled off the frail pink straw and flung it to the grass.

"The milliner who sold it to Mother said it did a lot for me. She knew her sales talk all right. What's the use having pretty things if you never see other girls? Just because we're the Gerard's of High Ledges. Mother won't let me have the village children come to play with me. I'd like to be with someone kind of young."

Poor, lonely little soul. Prue's heart warmed to her. Could she help? Time she snapped out of self-absorption and thought of someone beside David and herself. But Jean was so unattractive. All the more reason to help her.

HARD TO CROWD DAN CUPID OUT

HELEN WELSHIMER, in the New York World-Telegram.

Love makes the world go round, they say. If it doesn't act as chief motivating force it certainly contributes to the speed of the whirligig. Of course, synthetic values pass often for the guaranteed product. But it all comes under the same head.

Let's look at a newspaper for a recent day.

There was the story of the girls, ages from twelve to eighteen, in the reformatory at Rakospalota. The girls had soldier sweethearts. They weren't allowed to see them. So the maidens swallowed toothbrushes, teaspoons and articles of assorted sizes. Some are reported dying.

Puppy love, of course, but just the same a divine enchantment that made a captive maid swallow more than a lump in her throat because she couldn't have her soldier's kiss!

Age knows the allure of a romantic pick-me-up, too. A ninety-two-year-old Moslem farmer living near Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, couldn't resist the attraction of an eighty-one-year-old woman. But the bride's family—for she got to be a bride—said no, if she married it must be a man nearer her age. The couple eloped and lived in Elysium for three days. Then the romance faded, and the bridegroom, who was too old for the bride anyway (so her family had said), deserted the woman. Anyway, she had three days in her precarious heaven.

Down in Alcoa, Tenn., more than 200 men still in the plants of the Aluminum Company of America have discovered that the strike pickets at the gate are using love as an allure to bring them out. The pickets are holding up pictures of pretty girls. The men inside have wives and sweethearts. Therefore, it is thought that a desire for feminine companionship may lure the men from the plants.

Lystrata stopped a war, you know, by locking the women up and keeping the men out until the soldiers promised to stop fighting. Maybe the pickets will win, too.

There are breach-of-promise suits, alienation of affection suits, wedding, betrothals, divorces, in the examined newspaper. An heiress has married a truck driver. Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks have had a friendly tete-a-tete. Eva Coo, on trial for murder, has heard an ex-sultor testify. Oh, you can't get away from love! Or one of its by-products! It's all in the paper.

Hitler and Mussolini, robberies and the forest fires and the Chinese drowned in the floods do not constitute most of our news. It's love that keeps the printing press fed!

Sex, independent of love, has its columns, too. British women have won male jobs, that same day's paper announces. There are now 347 women blacksmiths in Britain. Amy Molliston has been given the honor of being the first airwoman ever employed as a pilot on the regular cross-channel service, a London dispatch asserts.

And oh yes, there are the birth columns! Hungary has rewarded one of its peasants because she had more children than any other woman in the nation.

She has had twenty-one children. There are 6,000 other Hungarian mothers whose average families are thirteen and one-third children. They received gold medals. That, too, we would classify as a love story.

It takes the grand emotion, be it sturdy or fluctuating, adolescent or senile, to keep the world going around in circles!

Atlantic Icebergs

The iceberg count of the North Atlantic varies considerably from year to year. In 1912, there were 1,100; in 1924 only 11; and this year about 700. They generally disappear in the Gulf Stream. The waters of the stream have been known to melt a berg the size of a city block within 36 hours.

Andorra remains poor to save their treasures

Andorra, the Republic of the Pyrenees, has been preserved intact since the days when Charlemagne crossed the almost impassable mountains to aid in driving back the Saracens.

In 805 A. D. he gave to a handful of mountaineers, supposed to be Visigothic refugees, a charter for the valley of Andorra in return for the protection and assistance rendered to him and to his armies. Content with their mountain territory, they enacted laws and established a republican form of government. They built settlements, and called their small capital Andorra. When the passes of the Pyrenees resounded on all sides with the noise of war, the Andorrans tended their flocks and cultivated their fields, and observed a strict neutrality, which has never been violated.

Although the mountains inclosing the small country are rich in valuable ores, they have never been worked because the philosophy of the inhabitants teaches them that they must remain poor, so that other countries will not raid them for their treasures. For some reason they remain ignorant. Only one out of 100 can read. They are Christians, and have a few learned men among them.

Prudence visualized Mrs. Walter Gerard leaving her brother-in-law in the Maine wilds lumbering for a female neighbor in the early twenties! As the roadster stopped before the red brick house, Prudence mused aloud:

"Something tells me that your sister-in-law won't go."

"Won't go! Of course she'll go. What would keep her when I want the house to myself?"

Prudence made no answer.

Prudence, in a sleeveless white linen frock, stopped before the scoured pine table to regard proudly the shining jars of ruby beads, arranged with the precision of an infantry squad on a mammoth white tray.

Andorrans Remain Poor to Save Their Treasures

Andorra, the Republic of the Pyrenees, has been preserved intact since the days when Charlemagne crossed the almost impassable mountains to aid in driving back the Saracens.

In 805 A. D. he gave to a handful of mountaineers, supposed to be Visigothic refugees, a charter for the valley of Andorra in return for the protection and assistance rendered to him and to his armies. Content with their mountain territory, they enacted laws and established a republican form of government. They built settlements, and called their small capital Andorra. When the passes of the Pyrenees resounded on all sides with the noise of war, the Andorrans tended their flocks and cultivated their fields, and observed a strict neutrality, which has never been violated.

Although the mountains inclosing the small country are rich in valuable ores, they have never been worked because the philosophy of the inhabitants teaches them that they must remain poor, so that other countries will not raid them for their treasures. For some reason they remain ignorant. Only one out of 100 can read. They are Christians, and have a few learned men among them.

Marvelous Human Eye, According to Novelist

Unless you read the best-seller novels or the so-called fiction in the magazines, you can never know the great number of stunts the human eye is capable of doing. Here are a few specimens:

Her eyes roamed carelessly around the room.

With her eyes she riveted him to the spot.

He withdrew his eyes from her face and they fell to the floor at her feet.

He drank her in with dancing eyes. Their eyes met for a long breathless moment and swam together.

Marjorie would often remove her eyes from the deck and cast them far out to sea.

He dropped his eyes, and a look of intense pain came over his face. His eyes met hers, and then fell.

Their eyes clashed and John uttered a shriek.

Her eyes rose from the table under the spell of his commanding voice.

Those Strong Men!

The "born leader" gets multitudes of people into trouble.

CALL ON BRAINS FOR SUPPORT

"Regimented" Propaganda Is Modern Idea.

Established Order Bolstered by Intellectuals.

No conscientious student of letters has been inclined to take too seriously the alarm that has been felt over the future of literature in Russia's proletarian state. After all, it was only a natural part of the revolution that the intellectuals should have been "regimented" for propaganda purposes.

History shows that it is the part of the intellectuals during stability to support the established order and when that order becomes insupportable to express, in varying ways, the intellectual ferment that precedes all fundamental shifts in political power. Thus the writers in Russia long ago became revolutionary propagandists. And when the revolution came they extolled the new regime more blatanly, but not less effectively, than the writers in a capitalistic state bend their art toward support of the homely virtues whence capitalism draws its strength.

Writers know this. Somerset Maugham, in the preface to "East and West," takes pains to inform his readers that the editor of the magazine where his stories mostly appeared never told him what to write or what not to write. If it were not at least suspected that writers are "regimented" under whatever political system, such declarations of independence would be superfluous. But there are degrees of regimentation, as of everything else. During a revolution the subtle concealment of propaganda under a layer of art disappears and the skilled writer becomes as unscrupulous as any hack publicity agent. That is what happened in Russia, when, in the phrase of Max Eastman, the artists were put in uniform.

The Russian revolution is now an accomplished fact. The need for obvious propaganda lessens. The diehards may still believe that there is an unlimited distinction between true proletarian writers and bourgeois intellectuals. But Karl Radek, one of Communism's most powerful thinkers, realizes that undiluted propaganda may eventually defeat its own ends. At a congress of all-Soviet writers in Moscow, Radek said that the bars must be let down and that the old theory of "he who is not with us is against us" would no longer rule in the arts.

And so it may soon be that the writers of Russia will lay aside their uniforms and the Russian artists in mufti will find new means for expression. Out of the chaos of revolution may appear the needed security which is the basis of all art. At the same time it may be well to speculate on the theory that the reason why literature has so lagged in the 300 years of America is because of its "regimentation" under such banners as Puritanism and Materialism. The growing determination of our writers to work under different standards and to talk openly of the place of propaganda in art is as significant as Radek's movement in the opposite direction.—Washington Post.

Sea Collisions Minimized

The danger of collisions at sea on foggy nights can now be minimized by a new invention which shows—with luminous spots and arrows on a compass-marked screen—the location and direction of every ship within a radius of ten miles. It is a cathode ray device which is operated by the radio signals sent out by other ships every twenty seconds. Pilots watching it know, practically by a mere glance at the chart, when and how much to change their courses.—Collier's Weekly.

Why Liquid Laxatives are Back in Favor

The public is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that the right dose of a properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a more natural movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. A child is easily given the right dose. And mild liquid laxatives do not irritate the kidneys.

Doctors are generally agreed that senna is a natural laxative. It does not drain the system like the cathartics that leave you so thirsty. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid laxative which relies on senna for its laxative action. It gently helps the average person's constipated bowels until nature restores their regularity.

You can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store, ready for use.

Race of Some Culture Evolved Stone Hammer

New evidence that the first clear distinction of modern mankind was the use of stone hammers instead of the stone knives and spearheads preferred by their ancient rivals, the Neanderthal ogre-men, now entirely exterminated, was reported in a recent address to the Royal Anthropological institute, in London, by Dr. L. S. B. Leakey, known for his discoveries of ancient human remains in east Africa now acknowledged to be the oldest bones of the modern type of man yet discovered, according to the Baltimore Sun.

These African finds confirm the theory that men of modern type lived in the world for thousands of years side by side with the squat, brutish and perhaps cannibalistic Neanderthal race, dim memories of which may be responsible for the world-wide tales of man-eating ogres. One physical difference between the two species seems to have been that the Neanderthals always had thick bony ridges just above their eyes, giving them a kind of perpetual frown but probably designed by nature merely to protect their eyes from injuries by blows.

Man and Mirror

Men have a penchant for sneering at the vanity of women and cite the fatal fascination a mirror holds for them. But did you ever see a man pass up a mirror? And did you ever study his maneuvers? If he thinks he's alone he'll give his visage the once over and register complete approval of the reflection. But if there is anyone around, he behaves in a thoroughly masculine manner. If he isn't making ostentatious efforts to straighten his cravat, he's touching a portion of his face gingerly with a finger, pretending he is studying a cut inflicted while shaving. Which ought to prove that women are more honest than men.—New York Sun.

While the family had been at the show, someone had entered the home thru a window, ransacked the house, even stripping the bedding from the beds, stole two revolvers, some sweaters, boys clothing as well as a grip or two and other loose things upon which they could lay their hands. The case was at once reported to local police but no clue to the burglar has yet been found.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
Christ Jesus' words, from Mark, "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many," are the Golden Text in the Lesson-Sermon on "Doctrine of Atonement" on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

Among the Bible citations in the Lesson-Sermon are the words of John: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved." Another selection contains Paul's exhortation to Timothy, "Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses."

A passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, says: "If Truth is overcoming error in your daily walk and conversation, you can finally say, 'I have fought a good fight. . . I have kept the faith,' because you are a better man. This is having our part in the at-one-ment with Truth and Love."

ATTENTION VOTERS OF OCEAN BEACH

It is gratifying to see so many people have at least thought enough of that priceless heritage, the right to vote, and have registered before and since the primary election as the present registration is the largest in years. Statistics taken over a period of years show us that only 55% of the registered voters of our state exercise the use of the greatest franchise that we, the people of a great republic, possess.

Therefore, we, the members of Ocean Beach Post 433 American Legion again offer our services to all eligible voters who by reason of sickness, disability and lack of transportation urge them to call Commander Ralph G. Chadwick, BV 0166-W and he will see that some Legionaire in their precinct will get them to the polls.

Again let it be known that The American Legion is non-political, so has no ax to grind or any candidates to offer but strongly urges every eligible voter to go to the polls and vote exactly as their conscience directs. This is just one of the many ways in which we offer service to the community, state and nation, and feel that the right to vote and using that right is one of the greatest proofs of Americanism.

Last night the members of the post and ladies of the auxiliary held a most delightful Halloween party at the Legion hall and old time games were played, such as bobbing for the apple, weird witch tricks and many others. Pumpkin pie and coffee were served. Many fancy costumes were in evidence.

Did You Ever Stop To Think?

Edson R. Waite
Shawnee, Oklahoma

It does seem that a lot of people are keeping as busy as a wind-mill trying to make politics the principal industry in this country. If they are not stopped they may succeed.

A whole lot of claims in every city never open their shells to look around.

Jim Barrett, managing director of the Oklahoma Biltmore Hotel, tells me that the only true economy is paying less for equal quality. Paying less for lesser quality is not a saving and may prove very wasteful. He further says that by reading the advertisements in your newspaper you will find the goods advertised which are lowest in price and highest in quality.

Some people not in business are hampered with such an unhappy nature they spend the time they should spend in making a living in trying to run down some other man's business. It is always a good idea to attend to one's own business of making a living and let the other fellow take care of his.

There are all kinds of merchandise for sale, but only one kind is offered you through the advertising columns of your newspaper—and that is the best kind.

Many people seem to be walking around with their heads in the clouds most of the time. If they don't look out they will be in the clouds for all time to come.

A man of seventy nowadays is past most fears of death. He cannot hope to live forever. He considers the future with dauntless eyes. He knows that old age must eventually overtake him, but when it does come he will be ready.
